

“You can measure your Spiritual Growth by your response to trials”

Charles Stanley

IF we are still responding to trials in a negative way rather than learn from it. We are not growing spiritually. When we become stagnant we begin to exhibit all sorts of fumes for others to smell.

When we become stagnant we begin to exhibit all sorts of fumes for others to smell.

One will be of pride (some might equate success to God by lips but inwardly credit themselves for it).

Let's all boast totally from the Grace of God that has enabled us to achieve in all that concerns us.

The other is arrogance/familiarity and boundaries.

Wow, the arrogance of many today is beyond words. We become too familiar with authorities over us (church, work, studies) and therefore cross boundaries we have no business crossing.

Let's all continue to focus totally on the word of God so that our totality is seasoned by him and exhibited as such in him alone.

Some might say I'm old enough and as such make my decisions. Yes, we might be but in the advancement of today's world, the wise who are progressing have their ear (spiritually and physically) to the ground and observations are an essential tool for them to use as well.

Let's concentrate on our God-given purposes through our daddy's lens alone. He alone can keep us moving away from broken cisterns so we do no exhibit unpleasant fumes.

Find a discerning mentor who will give you Godly wise counsel.

Finally, find a discerning mentor who will give you Godly wise counsel. Do not go to someone who will tell you what you want to hear only but one who can truthfully speak into your life. A mentor who can tell us when we have either messed up or on route to but, stand with us and guide us to refocus. These mentors are rare but there are always remnants in the land . Our God is faithful.

Have a blessed day
